Jagger, Aaron	First Sgt. Aaron Jagger was scheduled to come back to his hometown of Camden with his wife and five daughters for a family reunion the first week in July. He and his brother, Anson Jagger, 41, of Camden planned on playing music and celebrating with 150 family members. Instead, his leave time was canceled at the last minute and his family decided to stay at their home in Germany while he was deployed to a then unknown location. His wife and daughters finally made it to Hillsdale County yesterday, but, as Anson said, "not for the same reason. It's gonna be a little more somber." Aaron Jagger, 43, and two other soldiers were killed while stationed in Ramadi, Iraq, Aug. 9 when a roadside bomb exploded near their Humvee. The incident occurred during his second tour in Iraq, following two tours in Bosnia and serving in Operation Desert Storm in the early '90s. With 24 years of service and 7 1/2 years of combat experience, 1st Sgt. Jagger was used to action and assured his family that his return to Iraq would be uneventful. "He promised us nothing would happen to him," Anson Jagger said, recalling the conversation. The loss of Aaron Jagger comes on the heels of the death of younger brother Quinn Jagger, who died two years ago from brain cancer at age 36. Quinn Jagger was a graduate of Hillsdale College and a school teacher. Anson Jagger recalled writing Quinn's eulogy with Aaron Jagger on what would be his last visit to Camden. "I really had a chance to express to him how important it was that he was OK. I said, 'Aaron, do not make me go through this again.'" Aaron Jagger will be buried 10 feet from his little brother. Aaron Jagger was described by a friend as, "A little shorter...spiked hair and a quick smile, but very serious eyes...An amazing worshipper, an amazing musician." Having picked up music as a Camden-Frontier High School student, he has played and sang in bands and worship teams all over the world. Anson Jagger described how his brother's musical interests began in rock 'n' roll, moved through country and into contemporary Christian as he underwent a "re-conversion," of his faith. He led worship services in the U.S., Germany and out in the field in Iraq. His talents as a songwriter attracted the interest of Contemporary Christian artist Dwayne Jones who recorded Jagger's song, "It Was Me," on his album "Humble Me." "His personality was so engaging," said Anson Jagger, "he was a real good frontman, and after he found Jesus he was quite a witness to other servicemen."

One friend of Aaron Jagger recalled how he went beyond his musical talents to reach out to others in a letter. "Aaron saved my life when I was on the emotional edge," wrote the anonymous friend. "He could have gotten in trouble for what he did for me, but he did it anyway."

Aaron Jagger's brother and father recounted the Tuesday night they found out he had been killed.

"I went to bed pretty early," said Anson Jagger, "and my son took the call from Sandy (Jagger's wife) in Germany. I thought I was dreaming. It was terrible."

Anson left his home to tell his father the news, but was concerned that his oldest son, Seth, 19 wasn't home yet. "When something like this happens, you just worry to death where your kids are."

Upon arriving at his father's house, he found his son there, playing music with some friends in Aaron and Anson's "legendary band room" where they played together as teenagers.

"The irony of the news of Aaron, and Seth playing music at the same time..."

Aaron Jagger's father had only one word to describe his reaction to learning of his son's death: "Disbelief."

It was the belief, however, of Aaron Jagger that drew so many to his through his music, worship and friendships. In a Mother's Day card sent to his step-mother, Phyllis Jagger in May, he reflected on that belief and the impact of it in his life:

"For if it was without the Christian love, understanding and, yes, even the discipline, I would not be the man I am today."

Though the majority of his service was spent living in Germany, Anson Jagger believes that his brother's patriotism and American resolve were only strengthened by his time away.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," Anson Jagger said, "He would remember life in Hillsdale County as bigger than life. His patriotism was driven in by the dreams of the freedoms we have back home. The irony of it is those who have those bigger than life dreams of home are the ones who don't get to live them out."

Aaron Jagger leaves behind his wife, Sandy, 34; twin daughters Tessa and Ashley, 13; daughter Kelly, 12 and daughters Nicole, 21 and Kirstin, 17 from a previous marriage and step-daughters Maja and Elaine, daughters of his first wife; his sister, April, 45; brother Anson, 41; father, Dale 68; mother, Carol Bailey of Chattanooga, Tenn., and step-mother, Phyllis, 69.

No final plans have been made for funeral services. A viewing is tentatively planned for Friday evening at Kurtz Funeral Home in Hillsdale.

Jarman, Michael James	JARMAN, Retired Marine Corps Gunnery Sgt. Michael James, 52, passed away at Brandon Regional Hospital August 19, 2007, following a short battle with cancer. He was born September 11, 1954, in the town of Fort Hood, Texas, to the late James and Edeltraud Jarman. He enlisted in the Marine Corps and reported to Parris Island, S.C., October 27, 1977. After graduating, he was assigned to Camp Pendleton, Calif., as an amphibious tracked vehicle crewman. In June 1979, he became an aviation support equipment technician and was assigned to Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron 32, 2nd Marine Air Wing, at Cherry Point, N.C. In September 1980, he was assigned to VMA 331 for deployment to Iwakuni, Japan. Upon his return, in 1981, he was assigned to Marine Corps Air Station (MCAS) New River, Jacksonville, N.C. In July 1983, Michael was assigned to the recruiting station in Raleigh, N.C., and served as a recruiter for 18 months in Fayetteville, N.C. He was then assigned as the Military Entrance Processing Station (MEPS) liaison until August 1986. He then returned to MCAS New River, where he served as a work center supervisor and quality assurance inspector until January 1989. At that time, wanderlust set in and, in response to the growing need of the Marine Corps, Michael made a lateral move and was assigned to the 2d Surveillance, Reconnaissance and Intelligence Group, Camp Lejeune, N.C. At the conclusion of intelligence training in Dam Neck, Va., and Russian language school at the Defense Language Institute in Monterrey, Calif., he was designated an interrogator-translator and assigned to 2d Intelligence Company, 2d SRI Group, Camp Lejeune, N.C. As an interrogator, Michael participated in Desert Shield and Desert Storm in 1990-91, Operation Eastern Exit, the Noncombatant Evacuation Operation in Somalia 91, Operation Deny Flight and Provide Promise in Bosnia, in 1993-94 as part of Combined Task Force 62 and Joint Task Force Provide Promise, and returned to Somalia in 1993 in Operation Continue Hope. The years 1993-94 found Michael assigned to Joint Task Force 160 at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. For his final assignment, he reported in 1995 to U.S Central Command (USCENTCOM), where he retired from the Marine Corps in October 1998.

	After retiring, Michael decided to continue to support the nation's call against terrorism as the deputy chief to the Human Intelligence Collection Management shop. Not only did Michael show he was dedicated to his craft, but he ensured to entrust others with his knowledge to follow on. Although this gruff, big bear of a man had many opinions that he gladly shared, especially with adults he did not like, he was different around kids and they loved him for it. He was known to continue long, drawn out water balloon battles throughout the summer, go all out and decorate his home for Halloween, scare small children into paralytic states, cut out pumpkins in the most impressive designs, blast fireworks for the Fourth of July, and even do the Mentos-in-the-Coke-bottle trick to see the spray. Mikey was a big kid himself, although he never lost the respect of the kids or his peers. His generosity did not stop with the kids; Michael was always available to lend a hand for home improvement, give advice on the best way to fix a problem, give fashion advice and share his culinary skills. A consummate connoisseur, he would ask you if it looked like he would put anything in his mouth that tasted bad. If you ask those closest to him, they would tell you he could even change the weather; two anti-hurricane parties and so far we are out of the woods. Amongst these passions was also the desire to continue to explore this world, every year a new trip and every year another grand adventure story. He is survived by his wife, Patty; son, Christopher; daughters, Jennifer and Melissa; granddaughter, Zoe; and sister Theresa. Visitation will take place 6-8 p.m. Thursday, August 23, at Hillsboro Memorial Funeral Home, 2323 W. Brandon Blvd., Brandon, Fla., (813) 689-8121. A memorial service will take place at 10 a.m. Friday, August 24, at the same location. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Injured Marine Semper Fi Fund and Toys for Tots, or an education fund for Zoe Jarman at Wachovia Bank. Source: The Tampa Tribune, Tampa, FL, August 22, 2007, extracted September 28, 2007.

Jessen, Kevin P.	Staff Sgt. Kevin P. Jessen, 28, died Sunday in Rawah, the Army said. He was on a post-blast investigation when another explosion killed him, Army spokeswoman Maj. Elizabeth Robbins said. Jessen was assigned to the 22nd Chemical Battalion (Technical Escort) of the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland. He grew up in Oak Grove Heights, also known as Oak Grove, where the family had moved from Iowa before Jessen was born, his sister Tracy Miller said. Their father was a welder and had a small farm. The youngest child in the family, Jessen had an early interest in explosives, which eventually led to his military career, his sister said. "He liked to play with fire and explosives and just see what he could mix together to make a little bomb or whatever, his own little thing," she said. "And he ended up getting into that as a specialty, which was kind of ironic, but cool." She recalled that as a boy, her brother enjoyed tying his G.I. Joe toys to bottle rockets and firing them off. He also had a strong interest in history. "He could name every war and when it took place and all that stuff," she said. She said her brother had been in Junior ROTC as well as the National Guard before joining the Army. "I guess it was just his calling," she said. "Couldn't see him doing anything else." Miller also described her brother as dedicated to his family. He leaves a wife, Carrie Jessen, and a 2-year-old son, Cameron Jessen. Jessen and his family had just recently been stationed in Maryland. His current tour in Iraq was his third overseas deployment. He had traveled to the Mideast in the mid-1990s to help dispose of explosives left over from the first Gulf War, his sister said. He was sent to Iraq again in 2004 and returned after six months. Last year his father, Elmer Jessen, was sick with cancer while Kevin Jessen was undergoing further Army training. Miller said her terminally ill father told her brother not to return home when he passed. She said her father didn't want to interrupt her brother's training. "And so he [Kevin] didn't," she said. "That was very hard for him." But her brother had visited in June when his father was sick and came back to visit the family at Christmas, after his father had died. It was the last time his sister saw him.

	Miller said her brother had deployed to Iraq for the third time just a few weeks ago and tended to downplay the danger in occasional calls home. "He acted like there wasn't near the threat over there that there used to be," she said. Family members recently sent him two packages filled with his favorite snacks: pepperoni sticks, pistachios and almonds. "We had just sent that to him a couple of weeks ago," she said. "Hopefully, he got to enjoy at least part of it." Sunday night, the family was informed that Jessen had been killed. "They got called on an incident, the chaplain said when he came that night," Miller said. "And it just went wrong." The Army didn't inform Jessen's wife right away because she was staying with her mother in New York state and the Army didn't have her address, Miller said. The family in Oak Grove provided the address to the Army. "They showed up at her door at 6 o'clock Monday morning," Miller said. "And I know it's just horrible for her, she's got that baby and everything. But luckily she's with her mother." Funeral arrangements were pending. As of today, at least 2,301 members of the U.S. military had died since the beginning of the Iraq war in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count. Jessen is the 30th Arkansan to die, according to the AP. Source: The Sun, Baltimore, MD, March 7, 2006

TSgt. Jones was the NCOIC of the Air Operations phase of the 342 TRS, Det. I Pararescue school here at Kirtland Air Force Base. He had been the instructor at the Parajump school for the last four years and was scheduled to retire from the Air Force in May of 1999. TSgt. Jones was from Kearny, NJ. He entered the US Air Force on August 6, 1978 and was a pararescue man for his entire career. He was a veteran of Desert Storm withy over 1,000 flight hours and 502 parachute jumps. He was heavily involved in recovering space hardware during "To Catch a Falling Star" missions while stationed in Hickham AFB, HI in the early eighties. He was qualified as a NASA space shuttle recovery specialist, specializing in RAMZ (Rapid Alternate Method Zodiac) techniques and procedures while stationed at Eglin AFB in the late eighties. TSgt. Jones was credited with over 20 "saves" during operational missions throughout his career. His assignments also included Osan A.F.B., Republic of Korea, and Eglin, and Hurlburt A.F.B.'s. Arrangements for services, military escorts, and casket bearers have been provided by fellow members of Wayne's U.S. Air Force Pararescue Unit. Services will be held Monday, October 5, 1998, 10:00 a.m., at First Baptist Church, 101 Broadway Blvd. NE, with Chaplain Earl G. Sprague, Chaplain Jeff James, and Rev. Ray Gillespie officiating. Interment will take place Monday, 3:00 p.m., at Santa Fe National Cemetery, Santa Fe, New Mexico. Friends may visit French Mortuary, Lomas Blvd. Chapel, 10500 Lomas NE, Sunday, October 4, 1998, from 3:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Although Wayne has accomplished many things in his life, undoubtably his relationship with the Lord, Jesus Christ, was paramount. The love os his life was his bride, Jean. Not only was he a husband, but a friend. He cherished her and loved her with an everlasting love. He was a loving daddy and friend to his children as well. He delighted in his fatherhood. To his friends, he was a mentor, an example, an encourager, and a joy. Our comfort is that our Wayne is now in the presence of his Lord. "Thank you Mr. Wayne". Should friends desire, memorial contributions may be given for scholarships to benefit the Children of Wayne Jones, c/o Kirtland Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 80570, 87108.
